RECKLESS ASSASSINS.

The Murderers of Ira Mullins
Causing More Trouble.

Judge Lilly Says He Will Hang Them
Without Judge or Jury if They Set Foot in Kentucky.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

BIG STONE GAP, VA., June 9.—Doc Taylor, Henry Adams, Col. Flemmings and Henry Flemmings, the last two brothers, who were indicted for the massacre of Ira Mullins and wife and four others at Pound Gap, are reported to have been joined by Tom Little and his brother, who killed an officer named Wireman when he attempted to arrest them on warrants two years ago on Beaver Creek. The father, old Jeff. Flemmings, and a young brother of the Flemmings, have also joined them, and the party of outlaws are hiding out in the Pound neighborhood and defy arrest. They sent word yesterday to the officers at Gladeville, the county seat of Wise, telling them to come on and take them. The sheriff is at present busy in other parts of the county and has not time to go into the Pound after them.

Judge Lilly, the Circuit Judge of Perry and Letcher counties, and who was instrumental in breaking up the French-Everole feud, threatens to send out a party of men to hang Taylor's party without judge or jury if they dare set foot in Kentucky.

Mrs. Wilson Mullins, one of the two survivors of the Pound massacre, is still under the protection of the jailer at Gladeville. She refuses to say much about the killing. She is in great fear lest the murderers come to Gladeville and finish their bloody work by killing the only witness to their cowardly deed. She has good grounds for her fears.

A Horrible Railroad Accident.
Is a daily chronicle in our papers; also the death of some dear friend, who has died with Consumption, whereas, if he or she had taken Otto's Cure for Throat and Lung diseases in time, life would have been rendered happier and perhaps saved. Heed the warning! If you have a cough or any affection of the Throat and Lungs call at Tudor Drug Co.'s and get a trial bottle free. Large Size 50c.

A Mysterious Disappearance.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]
RICHMOND, KY., June 9.—June Park, a citizen of Irvine, has mysteriously disappeared, and his family are almost crazy with grief. Park was in the employ of A. L. Hope & Co., china merchants of Cincinnati, and May 29 left Barbourville for Jellico, since which time nothing whatever has been heard from him. He was a collector of his firm and a trusted employee, and a devoted husband and father, and his disappearance is ascribed to foul play.

Will Erect a Great Temple.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]
PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—The Odd Fellows of Pennsylvania propose to erect a great temple in this city. A site has been secured at Broad and Cherry streets. The structure will cost $400,000, and will be 170 feet long by 120 feet wide and 140 feet high, exclusively of the tower.

A Miser Commits Suicide.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]
BEATTYVILLE, KY., June 9.—Joe Dougherty, an old miser, committed suicide at Booneville. Some one told him that he would be fined and imprisoned for selling whisky to a minor, and this so preyed upon his mind that he took his own life rather than go to prison and part with some of his hoarded gold.

Just received, a very handsome line of new matings at Bloch Bros. We have also decided to sell twenty rolls of tapestry Brussels at less than cost of manufacture. jeb

Will Go to Russellville.

The Clarksville base ball team will go to Russellville to-morrow, where they will cross bats with the Russellville club.

TENNESSEE BANKERS.

Their Annual Session Now in Progress in Chattanooga.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 9.—The Tennessee Bankers' Association is holding its third annual session in the ball room of the Mountain City Club-house. The Rev. Dr. McCallie, in his prayer yesterday, asked that in the consideration of questions such as the demonization of silver, wisdom from high be given the meeting. An address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Andrews. President Spurr, in his annual report, reviewed the work of the association and was followed by Secretary Fowler, whose report congratulated the association on a membership of 944, a gain of 50 per cent. during the year.

The report of the legislative committee showed a reduction from $2 to $1 per $1,000 privilege tax on banking capital. A motion to ask the legislature to abolish the three days of grace on notes was carried with only four dissenting votes.

At the afternoon session J. R. Godwin, of Memphis, read a paper on the 10 per cent. tax of State banks.

FLOWER DAY.
The W. C. T. U. Celebrating It Throughout the Country.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

CHICAGO, June 9.—Among members of the W. C. T. U. throughout the world to day is celebrated as Flower Day by the sending of flowers with appropriate scripture texts to prisons, jails, almshouses, hospitals, and to the poor and sick everywhere, and the day is appropriate as being the birthday of Miss Jennie Cassidy, the national superintendent of the flower mission work, and who has been a bed-ridden invalid for many years.

GIVEN DIPLOMAS.
Three Tennesseans Graduate From the College of the Bible.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

LEXINGTON, KY., June 9.—At the commencement exercises of the College of the Bible here, the following young men of Tennessee were given diplomas: H. C. Calhoun, E. W. Elliott and W. M. White. The college is under the control of the Christian church, and these young men will probably become preachers of that denomination.

THE PEOPLES' PARTY.

The Convention Called to Order at Nashville To-day.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

NASHVILLE, June 9.—The State convention of the People's party was called to order at noon by Hon. J. W. James, of Chattanooga, for the purpose of selecting delegates to the national convention at Omaha, and of selecting presidential electors for this State. The attendance is small.

A PIONEER TEACHER.

HOW THE MEMORY OF EMMA WILLARD IS PERPETUATED.

Her Devoted Pupils Propose to Erect a Statue in Troy—She Founded the First Female Seminary and Wrote "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

[Special Correspondence.]

TROY, N. Y., May 19.—"The good that men do lives after them." This saying has perhaps never been more happily exemplified than in the results which have followed the life work of Mrs. Emma Willard. How many thousands of women's hearts all over this broad land must thrill with the memory of the old Troy Female seminary, with its long corridors, its familiar classrooms, its never to be forgotten schoolroom, its dreaded examination room, its park and its board walk—all now, alas! crumbling into ruins and soon to disappear before the advancing footsteps of progress.

When, in 1821, this famous school was established by Mrs. Emma Willard, it was the first and only one of its kind in this country, and we might say in the world, for at that time it was not considered proper for any young woman to receive a higher education than would fit her for the daily routine of family life.

As early as 1807 Mrs. Willard, then Emma Hart, commenced teaching in Middlebury, Vt., where she married Dr. Willard. After a short retirement, in 1814, she established a boarding school for young ladies, which she always regarded as the nucleus of her seminary, afterward transferred first to Waterford, near Troy, and finally to permanent quarters in the heart of this city.

It is needless to say that the seed was already germinating in the hearts of womanhood, which has since blossomed into a radiant flower, for hundreds of eager young girls soon flocked to the school where they could delve deeper into the wealth of literature, and imbibe stronger drafts of science and art than ever before.

It was only by hard study under many difficulties that Mrs. Willard succeeded in preparing herself to execute what she undertook to do—picking up her knowledge of physiology from her husband, of geometry from a young college student, whose Euclid she perused while he slept, and searching libraries eager to absorb information from every source. After her removal to Troy she studied at night with Professor Eaton, of the Institute, the lessons which she was to teach the next day.

During these early times many were the struggles for success and the battles to be fought against prejudice and jealousy for her superior system of education for women. She applied to the legislature of New York for public aid to carry on her school, but received at first only a charter granting her license to establish an academy, but before the close of that same session, observing the unprecedented success of the school, they voted her a portion of the public fund. The news of such a school spread rapidly, and it is estimated that between the years of 1821 and 1871 there was a total attendance of 18,500 pupils from north, south, east and west. Every state in the Union was represented.

With the increase of pupils came a demand for larger quarters, and buildings were added making provision for a great number of boarders, until the Troy Female seminary reached the dimensions of today. In 1838 her son and daughter-in-law succeeded her. A portion of the building is still occupied by a day school, carried on by Miss Emily Wilcox, a relative of Miss Willard's, but the generally deserted look of all the upper part, the closed blinds and dilapidated appearance speak volumes of departed glory.

Who shall say that the influence of Emma Willard has not been the inspiring in the great awakening all over the world in behalf of women's higher education, that it has not been instrumental in the foundation of the many colleges for their benefit, and the final opening to them of the universities and colleges for young men?

Mrs. Willard wrote and published several works, which would have given her a lasting fame aside from her school. She remodeled the entire system of teaching geography and history, and the result was "Woodbridge and Willard's School Geography" and "Willard's Histories and Chronography," including the "Temple of Time." As a physiologist she was equally successful, and published "Motive Powers of Circulation" and "Respiration and Its Effects," which were well received by the scientific world.

"Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," one of the finest songs in the language, was written by Mrs. Willard during a storm which she encountered while on a voyage to Europe. While visiting Greece she became deeply interested in the deplorable condition of the women there, and on her return succeeded in enlisting the sympathies of her friends so that she was enabled to establish a school there for their benefit. She donated to this object the entire proceeds of her "Notes of Travel," published shortly after.

Now, after a lapse of nearly twenty years since her death, those who profited by her influence rise up to do her honor. About two years ago the question of some appropriate memorial to Emma Willard was agitated in Troy, and it was finally agreed to erect a statue in her honor upon the spot where now stands the old seminary building. A committee was formed and subscriptions to the fund solicited. The statue will be of bronze, and, with possibly one exception, may be regarded as the first of its kind to be erected to a woman in this country. Its estimated cost is $15,000. If completed in time it is proposed to send the statue to the World's fair in Chicago, where it will be placed in the Woman's building.

One year ago a little band of comrades met in New York city and organized themselves into an association which should include not only the alumnae of the school, but every pupil who had ever received instruction within its walls. It required much energy and hard work to gather the scattered flock, but the few determined spirits who had the matter in hand persisted in their efforts. The result has been truly gratifying, for the Emma Willard association now numbers over 300 members and is an incorporated body. Meetings are held monthly at the house of the president, Mrs. Russell Sage.

A banquet, which was enjoyed by nearly 200 members, was given at the Plaza hotel on the 15th of October, 1891, and this is to be repeated annually. A graduate of 1829 was among those present and one of 1891.

Time brings many changes, and henceforth the old seminary walls, so long familiar to Troy's citizens and so endeared to thousands as the shrine of their alma mater, will be no more. A new building has arisen on the south side, in a line with the board walk, to be the home of education in this city. And it has been reared by the munificence of one citizen, Mr. Lewis Gurley, in remembrance of a sister, Miss Clara Gurley, who was educated there, and a brother, Mr. William Gurley, for many years president of the board of trustees. It is called Gurley Memorial hall, and will be appropriately inscribed as the Troy Female seminary, founded by Emma Willard in 1821. Its cost was about $45,000. This building will be dedicated, with appropriate ceremonies, on the 8th of June, 1892, and immediately after the closing exercises of the school the old building will be removed.

HELEN A. JOHNSON.

Historic Rock House.

HARRIMAN, TENN., May 19.—Two miles from Deer Lodge, east Tennessee, there is a place of great historical interest, known as the Rock House. It is a natural formation, away up at the head of a deep, shaded and secluded glen, and an experienced guide is always necessary to find the way to it. This Rock House was the refuge during the war of hundreds of loyal Union men and their families, who were compelled to seek safety in seclusion during that gloomy and bloody period. There is an overhanging rock of immense proportions, the space underneath being large enough to accommodate 500 or 600 people. It is forty feet from the ground at the mouth or front to the rocky roof overhead, this height being gradually reduced as it goes inward. The width at the front and for some distance back is forty-five yards, or 135 feet.

A spring of clear, cold water comes from the earth at the extreme rear of the cavern—a Providential provision as many believe. The place is as impenetrable and hard to reach now as it was when the poor refugees trod the secret paths which they alone knew during the war.

Not many miles away still lives John De Armond, who at one time was under sentence of death for maintaining his Union sentiments and rendering aid and comfort to northern soldiers. Uncle John refused to leave his home and seek protection elsewhere, and finally he fell into the hands of a desperate squad of Confederates, and was sentenced to be shot the next morning at sunrise. That night, however, a detachment of Union cavalrymen dashed in and not only saved Uncle John's life, but captured his captors and took them to camp. He is living on his farm, enjoying the peaceful side of his life.

J. W. BRIDGELL.

Couldn't Get and Bear It.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Mr. Carl Schurz is a man whose friendship with Mr. Nast could not bear the strain of the artist's pencil. "My caricatures," said Mr. Nast, "made him very angry at me. And although I feel as kindly toward him as ever, we never speak to each other when we meet. For my part, I see no reason why I should not be permitted to differ with people politically and to express myself in my own way without forfeiting their esteem and friendship. It appears to be only when one is a caricaturist that difference of opinion necessarily involves the penalty of enmity and hatred." X.

BLEW OFF HIS HEAD.

Terrible Affair Recorded at Mt. Sterling, Ky.

George McCormick Attempts to Kill Dr. Spratt—Failing He Blows Out His Own Brains.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

MT. STERLING, KY., June 9.—At Carmage last night, about 12 o'clock, George McCormick, a well known citizen, after first attempting to kill Dr. J. B. Spratt, blew off the top of his own head with a shot gun, loaded with buck-shot.

About 12 o'clock as Dr. Spratt, who had been out to visit a patient, was coming into Carmage he was fired upon by McCormick, the charge barely missing his head, imbedding itself in a barn near Mr. Joseph Rye's house. Immediately afterward McCormick reloaded his gun, and with the remark: "The next load won't miss anybody," he went to his brother Alex's house half a mile from his home. He went to the barn, and applying the gun, blew the top of his head off, the heavy charge shattering the skull and spattering blood and brains all around.

The cause of McCormick's attack upon Dr. Spratt is unknown, as no trouble was known to have occurred between them. McCormick was an ex-deputy sheriff and highly respected. The affair has shocked the entire community. It is supposed that McCormick was temporarily insane.

EDWARD M. FIELD.

His Physical Condition Said to be Steadily Improving.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 9.—The physical condition of Edward M. Field, of New York, who was sent to the State hospital here about two months ago, continues to steadily improve, although Superintendent J. B. Hudson will say nothing as to his mental condition pending his official report to the court. Field is now allowed out on the grounds of the institution every day, although always accompanied by two guards. He was committed to this institution in order that the question of his sanity might be settled, and should he recover to a sufficient degree he will be taken back to New York for trial on the indictment still holding against him.

Clarksville Tobacco Market.

Receipts continue good, and under an active market sales are large and will be between 1,500 and 1,600 hogsheads for the week. Holders are pushing to sell, and buyers meet them freely, and the prices obtained are generally satisfactory. A few wrappers are appearing on the board and bringing fine prices. Planters have had a continuous planting season, with really too much rain to put the crop out properly.

MORE MCKINLEY TALK.

The Republican Convention Adjourns Again For Time.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

MINNEAPOLIS, June 9.—The Republican convention re-assembled at 11 o'clock to day and was called to order by Chairman McKinley.

The committee on Credentials asked for more time and the convention adjourned till 8 o'clock to-night. The belief now is that neither Blaine nor Harrison will be nominated. There is more McKinley talk in the breeze, and the great apostle of protection may yet head the ticket.
